

Client's Name:

Course:

1 August 2011

Conveying thoughts effectively is an arduous task and not many teachers can do this perfectly well. Setting realistic targets should be the first target of any teacher, bringing about transformation requires a lot of diligence; this paper will comprehensively present the targets for 3 months, 6 months and the whole year.

Building a good relationship with students would be accomplished in 3 months and does not require a great deal of hard work. Improved quality of lesson plans is the target for 6 months and for 12 months the target would be to have a better classroom environment. To accomplish these goals it is very important to go step by step.

Building a good relationship is a methodical procedure; the students should feel free to express themselves when they are in the classroom. To be able to do this they need several opportunities to talk in the classroom. We all have problems and by asking the students to share their problems one can really connect with them. A good teacher always tries his best to solve these problems and by listening and solving their problems a good relationship will be established. This activity can be done in the last 10 minutes of each class; every student should be given a chance to express themselves. Once a good relationship is built tougher goals can easily be achieved.

Improving the quality of lesson plans require a lot of research which can be done by both the teachers and the students. Students can suggest ways which they enjoy and teachers should try and incorporate those ways into their lessons. Teaching aids could be one enjoyable way which would help in teaching the students.

Better classroom environment means a free environment, students must feel free and comfortable when it comes to interacting with the teacher, and everyone must be provided with an opportunity to contribute towards making the classroom environment better.

These goals can easily be measured from time to time by asking students for their valuable feedback, if the students fail to improve it only goes to show that the teacher must not get dejected and put in more hard work so that the same goals are accomplished at the very earliest. In case the teacher fails to achieve the goals, the next two steps should be to work harder and to work even harder. People who work hard often get lucky; the teacher should understand the psyche of the students to be really able to bring about a positive change. "It is important for teachers to consider themselves when thinking about goals. Improvement of self will lead to a healthier teacher, who is better equipped both emotionally and physically to handle the challenges that come up each day. Improving professional relationships falls into this category as well, considering the fact that the better the working environment, the more focused the teacher will be." (Goals for Teacher Improvement) This is how a teacher should go about improving the overall quality of students. These were some ways which have always worked and will continue to work in the future too.

Works Cited

Goals for Teacher Improvement. New Teacher Support. n.p., Web. 1 August. 2011.

<<http://www.suite101.com/content/goals-for-teachers-a84447>>

